

Pandemic? Vaccine? What's going on?

(Blog 0005 AndrewHadden.com)

There are some things going on to do with the pandemic and the vaccines that I feel compelled to inform people about. God absolutely stunned me with what he says is actually going on. But first some background.

Why is Bill Gates suddenly so concerned about the welfare of the world so as to insert himself and his billions into the worldwide effort to vaccinate people for their good, to prevent the spread of disease and protect people from infection? You have to understand that I developed my perspective on Bill Gates from being around for the first IBM PC and every major innovation in that market and industry ever since. I worked in Management Information Systems when the first PC's showed up. Our area had them and did graphics and spreadsheets for the executives of a major corporation. We also had access to computer-related journals and magazines and the Wall Street Journal. I followed the industry for many years thereafter whether I was working in it or not.

What I remember of Bill Gates is this. He dropped out of college and worked on software for the tiny and relatively insignificant microcomputers that came before the IBM PC. Then, IBM needed an operating system for the IBM Personal Computer – which they famously figured would not sell enough units to make it worth their while to expend the time to create their own operating system. (This was regarded as one of the worst business decisions of all time.) So, Bill Gates got offered an exclusive deal to create the operating system and provide it for future units (which went a long way toward making him the billionaire he is today). Bill, by the way, bought, for I think it was fifty thousand dollars, an operating system another company had developed and modified it to serve the needs of the IBM PC. He was not a fledgling stellar genius some try to make him, but a very lucky businessman.

But Bill Gates was also a very shrewd businessman. Some would say he was also an absolutely ruthless businessman. I remember him entering into what seemed a friendly and mutually beneficial agreement with the leading name in local area networking, Novell. But then Microsoft took what they learned and competed mercilessly with them and now owns their market. He also would announce that he was working on a graphical user interface in response to someone else (Apple) having one ready for sale in what caused almost everyone to pause and wait for the behemoth Microsoft's version (which seemed to take forever to release, and several releases to really convince the market to use it). Then one of Microsoft's people let slip that the previously dominant word processing software would never be as fast as Microsoft's entry into that market, and people wondered how they could make that boast. Eventually, it was claimed that they had included in the operating system secret modules they could use to be faster than the ones they told others to use. Eventually he lost a big antitrust suit. You don't get dragged into court in big antitrust suits by being magnanimous toward others.

And Bill Gates was not known for moral character in industry media I saw. I remember a famous quote from him about how he declared, at a big industry conference I think, that he intended to get "laid." And now, in his divorce, it has come out that he appears to have been pals with Jeffrey Epstein, the famous purveyor of underage girls to rich and famous people. I think it is safe to say he was not someone anyone would figure to become a missionary doctor to spare the third world from diseases.

So, what is Bill Gates up to with regard to vaccines? He has a foundation (a non-profit corporation) that I understand is very much in the middle of vaccines and stands to make a great deal of money. Now we have learned, from the Clintons, that a foundation can be very instrumental in holding money you control and want to use for whatever purpose, including employing relatives and cronies and others you want to reward.

And I also understand that somehow, Bill Gate's foundation has been given privileges and protections on the international scene, including the United Nations, that have never gone to anything but a country before. I understand they are immune from investigation and audit, like a country – not like a business or typical nongovernmental organization (NGO). Apparently, nobody can look over their shoulder and see what they are up to – nobody. Why? And Bill Gates has been given a seat at the table of policy makers like nobody else. Why? He bought it, basically. By giving a lot of money to a lot of people and their organizations he is getting unprecedented privilege – and power. Why is he interested in that power? His history is as a shrewd and merciless businessman of less than admirable personal morals (at least in my opinion, which I am entitled to). Why is he being given such power and protected secrecy?

The United Nations, through its World Health Organization, has great power, in concert with national governments, to force people to inject things into their body, even against their will, especially if it is called a “vaccine.” Vaccines have been around a long time and have done much good. However, since Bill Gate's influence, the very definition of a vaccine has been quietly changed. Under the old definition, coronavirus “vaccines” do not qualify, not at all. They are something entirely different and much more sophisticated – and far more risky and unproven, especially as to long-term effects. Vaccines used to be made from killed or weakened agents of disease injected into the body to get the body to react and develop immunity to the real, live and dangerous, agent of the disease. Generally, the risks of that from unforeseen reactions were greatly outweighed by the benefits of preventing previously widespread diseases, like polio, which used to cripple many people. That is NOT what the coronavirus vaccines are. They are not vaccines by the definition most people still use. How did this happen? Great power was brought to bear to change the long widely accepted definition of a vaccine, the power of Congress. What did this do? It cleared the way for experimental, unproven, and vastly more risky and less effective instruments of disease fighting to slip under the radar of the public, and be accepted as if it were just another shot like the ones everyone had to have to go to public school. Let's ask why.

I understand the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) process for approving new medicines. I worked in the pharmaceutical industry as a consultant to the research and development arm of a prosperous pharmaceutical firm. I did systems work on a huge project trying to expedite getting drugs through the FDA approval process. The FDA protects us all by insisting on companies meeting strict “safety and efficacy” standards in clinical trials. The safety standard seeks to make sure it will subject the public to no unwarranted risk to their health. The efficacy standard seeks to make sure the drug is effective – that it provides the benefit it claims to provide – like cure or prevent a disease or lessen its effects. The coronavirus vaccines have been allowed to bypass these standards, even though companies have tried for many years to get a coronavirus vaccine to pass these tests and all have failed. Why?

Well, the answer everyone would naturally give after all the government and media indoctrination is that we are in a “pandemic.” No, we are not. No, we are not in a pandemic, not by the previous definition, the one most everyone in the world is still using in their head. The definition of a pandemic has been changed along with the definition of a vaccine. This was not a pandemic by the old definition. It is only a “pandemic” because of the new definition. And almost nobody is effectively telling the American public, and the world, that the definition has very much changed in a very significant way. Why? Because without calling this a pandemic you could not get everyone to go along with a lot of measures recently taken, including getting them to take these “vaccines.”

This was not a pandemic by the definition you were always used to because that definition of pandemic used to include a necessary threshold of lethality – the rate of deaths to the rate of those infected. Take that out of the definition of a pandemic and it appears something akin to a new strain of the common cold could be called a pandemic if it spread like one, but does not kill like a pandemic used to. It appears the annual flu could potentially now be called a pandemic. The annual influenzas that have come and gone all our lives killed people. In fact, it appears they killed people in much the same numbers as coronavirus. I saw an article on how a graduate student put research on the web showing the actual death rate for the country had not changed during the coronavirus pandemic and it was pulled and disappeared. People are shouted down or silenced for saying it, but it is true enough.

The American people have not been told that their economy has been horrifically damaged, and their personal finances and freedoms horrifically damaged, by something no more a pandemic than the annual flu of the past. Yes, lots of people died, as publicized to no end, but this was not a true pandemic and it was hardly more lethal than the flu outbreaks of the past. If people had not died of coronavirus, they would have died of the flu or something else. People die. They do it every year. Death is part of life. The aged and infirm and people with underlying health conditions eventually don’t make it through another year of the annual flu. That is a fact. I had an annual flu hit me so hard in my thirties that an ambulance was called. And I was quite healthy. It happens.

So why change two widely used and widely trusted definitions – “pandemic” and “vaccine” – and make very sure the general public does not notice? Aren’t you curious? I am. And why give special permission to bypass safety and efficacy tests meant to protect the American public from disastrous consequences of improperly tested medicines? (This makes me think of the thalidomide babies born with missing, shortened, or malformed limbs from a medicine not properly tested.) And why the big push to intimidate everyone into being vaccinated and convince them that is the only way to return to normal life and have a real Thanksgiving dinner again? If I have had the disease, I think I will have better immunity than these vaccines can give and possibly with greater safety. And I have heard a very qualified, Mayo-Clinic-trained doctor assert that there is a very effective treatment for coronavirus but it has been suppressed because of a conflict of interest, because the National Institute of Health holds a financial interest in a vaccine (and an effective treatment would lessen the pressure to spend on the vaccines).

If the total death rate has not changed, and I understand it hasn't, then it appears somebody has perverted the gathering of death statistics – and they have, per what I have heard. Such as the complaint of a doctor that they were forced to report as a coronavirus death, a death that was very obviously from a car accident. What are they doing? Are they testing every corpse for coronavirus and, if coronavirus is present, no matter the evident cause of death, counting it as a coronavirus death? Or is the lie even bigger than that? Let's see some published data on deaths in all categories over many years and let's see what the numbers say. If people, including the media, won't publish those numbers, I'd say we have pretty good proof the American public has been lied to.

What are they really trying to accomplish? How about justifying mail-in ballots which subject our elections to much greater potential fraud than in-person voting with government-issued proof of identity and eligibility to vote? What about using those fraudulent election results to pass laws to make sure that kind of fraudulent election is under their control from now on?

Sorry folks, it is even more diabolical than that. If I hear from God at all, and I believe there is proof that I do, something far more diabolical is also going on. Those in control of this are seeking to inject into every American's body, and the bodies of everyone in the world, if they can, something that accomplishes a diabolical purpose to the benefit of some very evil people seeking to rule us.

God spoke to me about the vaccine and utterly stunned me. He linked together something he had previously pointed out to me, that greatly increases people's vulnerability to being controlled by others, to the vaccine, and I was utterly stunned. This is an incredibly serious concern. I never would have even considered a possible connection.

My job is to expose evil. It's your job to test what I say and pray about what your job is to do with this. Personally, give me an injection with live coronavirus and quarantine me for 14 days instead of making me take this so-called "vaccine." Oh, and give me some of what the doctor trained by the Mayo Clinic said is an effective treatment being suppressed because of a government conflict of interest. Then if you want proof of immunity, I'll have it – at least as valid as those supposedly vaccinated. I'll bet on my immune system over these vaccines – that have never passed the standard safety and efficacy tests. And let's see if those that vehemently argue for a person's right over their own body want to destroy all those arguments by saying the government has a right to force me to take an unproven and improperly tested "vaccine" that is not really a vaccine, by the still generally understood definition, for a pandemic that is not really a pandemic, by the definition most of us still use.

I thought the above would wrap this up, but then news hit that really has to be included. Suddenly, the mainstream media totally reversed its utter disdain for anyone suggesting that this virus could have come from a lab in China, including disdain for a sitting President – because somebody got access to Fauci's emails under a legal process meant to protect the American public. Now the truth can't be hidden any more, so they have to clear their throats and act like this is all a mistake, and one of little consequence? Or was it a coverup that can't be covered up any more? Let's find out. Is it another major lie put over on the American public? Let's find out.

Then this abyss got deeper. Then I saw a story on a high-level defector from China's security apparatus that reportedly escaped with a terabyte of documents in electronic form, an astonishing amount of data in most people's thinking. He is reported to have proof the Chinese military created this virus. He is also reported to have proof they had an analysis of its impact on the world if they released it, from before it "escaped" per other news sources. He also is reported to have lists of spies here under false names in universities who are really offspring of high level communist party elites under a special program/plan. And he has names of Americans being bribed by the communist Chinese government to betray their country, including politicians. I'm still waiting for this to be the lead story on all the networks, unless a major sweep to arrest the perpetrators is underway that justifies temporarily burying the story at the government's request. Oh, and the story also sees this as the reason for the mainstream media backing off on their effort to demean anyone actually proposing the truth about this virus's origin. I wonder if any of these media elites know their names are in that terabyte of data? Or are they just trying not to look like they were in on all this deception? Were they? Let's find out.

And, while we're at it, why this strong, sudden, and almost unexplainable swing toward socialism/communism in the party that this pandemic put in office? They campaigned on the pandemic over and over. They pushed the mail-in voting being necessitated by the pandemic. Joe Biden did not campaign on this strong swing to socialism/communism, but as a moderate. Have we been purposely deceived? Whose names are on the lists with which this man defected? Let's find out. For the sake of America, let's find out.

This blog sat for months, since some time in June, waiting for God to say when to post it. Then this morning, October 19th, God said, "The vaccine, it's not a vaccine. It's something else. You need to tell them: 'It's something else. What are they doing? Find out. We need to find out. What's in it? The nation needs to know. What's in it?' That's your job – expose it. They'll take it from there."
